

Home Security Systems

FBI Crime Statistics

- A burglary occurs every 14 seconds
- Most burglaries happen during the day between 6am and 6pm
- The average residential burglary victim loses over $1,000
- The average burglar comes in through the front door

Homes with a monitored security system are 3 times less likely to be broken into or robbed than homes without such a system.

Burglars may not be the smartest bunch, but they can tell when it is more likely they will be caught.

By making it harder for them, you're encouraging potential burglars to leave you alone.

Security Solutions for Your Home

BECAUSE NOTHING IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN THE SAFETY AND PROTECTION OF YOUR FAMILY

Statistics show that more than 65% of burglaries on houses equipped with burglar alarms are deterred, incomplete, or totally defeated

Nothing is more important than the safety and protection of your family. Whether you live in a tiny studio apartment or a three-story mansion, you want peace of mind that an intruder won't harm your property or your family. With a monitored home security system, it's like you have a guard on-duty around the clock, whether you're sleeping or thousands of miles away on vacation.

CHOOSING A SYSTEM

When it comes to home security systems, you have plenty of choices. From traditional wired equipment to use to whether or not to use a monitored system tend to be two of the most considerations when designing a home security system that gives you peace of mind. Fortunately, we can help customers to educate themselves about these options to help you choose the right system to protect your family and your home.

24/7 ALARM MONITORING

Dynamark security systems include 24 hour monitoring for your home security system. This will give you the most comprehensive form of protection. If your alarm is activated, it will immediately send a signal to the monitoring station. You can receive a phone call to determine what needs to be done, OR a call will be placed directly to emergency services.

PROVIDING FIVE LEVELS OF PROTECTION

- PERIMETER PROTECTION
- INTERIOR PROTECTION
- FIRE PROTECTION
- PERSONAL PROTECTION
- 24/7 MONITORING

HOME SECURITY

A typical monitored alarm system includes:

Control Panel. This is the “brains” of the entire house alarm system. Typically, the control panel is hidden from plain sight – located in the back of a closet or in your garage – and is connected to all other alarm components including a standard phone line.

Security Keypads. These are installed inside the main entrance of your home and allow you and your family to activate and deactivate the system with the push of a few buttons. A digital display notes whether the system is armed or disarmed. A single keypad can be set up and installed in one location throughout your home – either in the front or back of a master bedroom so you can trigger it if you hear an intruder while in the shower.

Motion Detectors. Also known as passive infrared (PIR) detectors, these devices sense changes in infrared energy levels when an intruder is present, even if no button is detected. They are typically installed indoors at walls, doors, windows, and air ducts.

Door and Window Contacts. These magnetic devices are placed along door jams and window frames and trigger the alarm system when opened.

Glassbreak Sensors. Also referred to as “audio discrimination,” these sensors convert the acoustic shock waves of glass breaking into an electrical signal that will activate the security system.

Sirens. Loud bells, horns, and/or strobe lights can be installed inside and outside your home to draw immediate attention to the intrusion.

Signs and Decals. We will furnish you with signs to post on your lawn, and stickers to place on the inside of your windows and glass doors to warn potential intruders that your home is protected by a Dynamark Security System.
